Ethnopolitics is an authoritative peer-reviewed journal for exchange on one of the political phenomena that had a decisive impact on global affairs during the last decades of the 20th century and continues to be of great significance in the new millennium. The journal gives a voice to established as well as younger researchers and analysts from academic as well as practitioner backgrounds. We publish articles of the highest quality in the field of ethnopolitics; our section 'Briefings and Analysis' in particular offers such articles with a specific focus on current events and developments. The 'Symposium' section provides a forum for engagement and discussion on issues that are of fundamental importance for theoretical and policy debates in our area of interest.

Editorial correspondence, with regard to proposed special issues, special sections and symposia, should be emailed to the Editor, Stefan Wolff, at stefan@stefanwolff.com.

Business correspondence, including orders and remittances relating to subscriptions, advertisements, back numbers and offprints, should be addressed to the publisher, Taylor & Francis, T&F Customer Services, T&F Informa UK Ltd, Sheepen Place, Colchester, Essex CO3 3LP, UK. Notes for Contributors

The editors of Ethnopolitics invite the submission of original research articles (up to 10 000 words), research notes (up to 5000 words) and review essays (3000–4000 words). By submission of a manuscript an author certifies that the work is original and is not being considered simultaneously by another publisher.

All such submissions should be submitted via Editorial Manager. Please refer to: <http://www.tandfonline.com/action/authorSubmission?journalCode=reno20&page=instructions#.VtVjDmVWLIU>. Papers for special issues, special sections and symposia should be submitted directly to the editors at k.cordell@plymouth.ac.uk and stefan@stefanwolff.com.

Once you have submitted your manuscript, the editors will contact you and acknowledge your submission. Each manuscript receives an initial internal screening by the editors determining its suitability for the journal. This is followed by an anonymous peer-review process at the end of which the editors will make a decision about your manuscript.

The review process normally takes approximately 8–10 weeks, but can occasionally exceed this time frame. The editors endeavour to reach an informed decision quickly and to keep you up-to-date about the status of your manuscript.

The cover page should contain the title and a short abstract of around 100 words. The abstract should be clear and informative, giving an indication of the scope of, and results contained in, the paper. A separate sheet should give the name(s) and affiliation(s) of the author(s).

The main text with endnotes. All notes should be numbered sequentially and appear as endnotes. They should be referred to in the text by superscripts 1, 2, 3 etc. The notes themselves should be gathered together at the end of the manuscript before the references section.

References should be cited in the text by giving the last name of the author(s) followed by the year of publication in parentheses, e.g. Smith and Jones (2003); (Smith 2001a, 2001b).

The full references must be listed at the end of the manuscript in APA style:
